STRANGE BUT TRUE

Most volcanoes spit out magma, ash and gas when they erupt, but a few rarer ones have been known to eject diamonds.

The longest recorded burp lasted one minute and 13 seconds.

Some German nursing homes use fake bus stops as a way to round up patients with Alzheimer's or dementia who seek to return home via public transportation. A staff member approaches and lets them know that the bus will be late, then invites them inside to wait more comfortably. Within a short time, the incident is typically forgotten.

Bald himself, Hippocrates recommended a treatment consisting of pigeon droppings, opium, beetroot, horseradish and spices to cure hair loss. No, it wasn't successful.

Celebrating the Benefits of Coexisting with Nature

By Jennifer Harrison

In an era often defined by headlines of environmental collapse and climate anxiety, a new four-part documentary series arrives to offer a different narrative. Premiering Wednesday, April 29, at 10 p.m. on most PBS stations, "Shared Planet" offers inspiring stories of people and wildlife flourishing together and celebrating the benefits of making room for nature. Each story explores how people and wildlife can thrive together in every ecosystem — from oceans to forests, from megacities to grasslands. This isn't just another nature documentary; it is a blueprint for an alternative future, where humanity makes intentional room for the natural world.

Filmed in ultra-high def 8K, "Shared Planet" invites audiences to immerse themselves in breathtaking landscapes and captivating wildlife action. The series spans dozens of countries and features individuals from all walks of life interacting with nature in innovative ways. Each story explores how people and wildlife can thrive together in every ecosystem — from oceans to forests, from megacities to grasslands.

The first episode, "Cities," explores the surprising benefits of reshaping urban environments to make space for wildlife. In Los Angeles, a mountain lion unites a community and becomes the unofficial mascot of the city, while in Kolkata, locals clean the urban wetlands, creating an incredible wildlife habitat and supporting thousands of jobs. In New York City, the Billion Oyster Project restores reefs to New York Harbor, helping to protect the city from dangerous hurricanes. And in futuristic Singapore, urban reforestation efforts have transformed the city, enhancing citizens' lives and attracting wildlife such as hornbills.

"Open Spaces," the second episode of "Shared Planet," tells the remarkable stories of people reshaping how we live and work in the planet's grasslands, deserts and savannahs. Maasai Lion Ambassadors in Africa show the value of living alongside lions, while in Mexico, flower-loving bats revive the tequila and mezcal industries. In Brazil's Cerrado, farmers benefit from coexisting with wildlife like giant anteaters, and South African flowers provide water for millions in Cape Town.

The third episode, "Forests," will show the resilience of people living and working in forests while still coexisting with wildlife. In Borneo, efforts are underway to plant native trees within palm oil plantations, creating wildlife corridors for orangutan families to travel in the treetops. In Guatemala, a community forestry organization sustainably harvests trees, protecting habitats like those of the highly endangered scarlet macaws. In Spain, a landowner restores his farm, overrun with invasive, flammable pines, to support wildlife like the rare Iberian lynx and secure his family's future. In Madagascar, the local community makes a living from vanilla production and works with a researcher to protect rare lemurs and other wildlife. And in Japan — the first country to provide scientific evidence of the health benefits of forests — 100 "forest bathing" areas are being created, benefitting the mental and physical health of humans who visit them as well as the wildlife that live there.

An agave producer processes the harvest in Oaxaca, Mexico, where flower-loving bats have helped to revive the tequila and agave industries, on "Shared Planet," premiering Wednesday April 29, at 10 p.m. on most PBS stations.

"Waters," the fourth and final episode of "Shared Planet," highlights the efforts of human beings around the world to maintain the balance of nature in the world's oceans and freshwaters. In Alaska's Bristol Bay, salmon are flourishing thanks to efforts to balance harvesting with protection, creating sustainable livelihoods for people and feeding hungry bears and seals every year. In Raja Ampat, dynamite fishing once threatened marine life, but it is now a Marine Protected Area with unmatched biodiversity and more jobs for the locals. In Idaho, a cattle rancher collaborates with an unlikely ally — beavers — to hold water on his drought-stricken land and manage water flow. In Brazil's Pantanal wetlands, ecotourism helps jaguars thrive alongside major cattle ranching operations. And in the Amazon, communities work together to conserve one of the world's largest freshwater fish — the pirarucu — which feeds hundreds of villages.

"Shared Planet" captures the beauty and intricacies of our natural world, immersing audiences in stunning landscapes with unforgettable characters. In our current age of devastating environmental challenges, "Shared Planet" offers a vision that could help the next generation bring real change.

"Shared Planet" will stream simultaneously with broadcast and be available on PBS.org. Executive produced by an Emmy Award-winning team including Neil Nightingale (former creative director of BBC Earth), directed by Jeff Turner (Planet Earth, Island of the Sea Wolves), and filmed by director of photography Justin Maguire (Planet Earth, Born in China), "Cities" is produced and directed by Geordie Trifa. "Open Spaces" is produced and directed by Chelsea Turner. "Forests" is produced and directed by Louise Ferguson. "Waters" is produced and directed by Jeff Turner. The series is written by David Fowler, Chelsea Turner, and Jeff Turner. Justin Maguire is the director of photography.

NOW HERE'S A TIP

Putting in your spring garden? To keep your nails from developing a dirt problem, use this classic tip: Bake your nails over a bar of soap. It "seals" the gap underneath, and later when you wash your hands, the soap slips right out, no need to spend time scrubbing out the dirt!

Add these to the list of items to eliminate the odor of cooking cabbage: a heel of bread, a whole walnut or a pinch of baking soda.

Love beans but trying to save a little money? Don't be intimidated by dry beans. Just rinse them and chuck them in the slow cooker. Add water according to package directions and cook on low for up to eight hours. After they are cooled, you can bag them in zip-top bags and freeze them for easy use later.

If you keep a couple of crackers in your sugar jar, they will keep the sugar from caking.

If you or your kids have trouble drifting off to sleep, try this aromatherapy trick: Spray sheets with a diluted lavender essential oil. Lavender is classic for sleep-time.

"To make the most handy long handled garden tool, do this right now: Lay the tool on the ground (it can be a hoe, rake, whatever you use most) and, using a tape measure, mark out feet and inches with a permanent marker right on the handle. Now, when you go to put plants in the ground, you can space them out perfectly by laying down your tool along the planting line." — C.O. in Arkansas

CYBERWAVES

New this week

Premiering on AppleTV+ April 29, the horror-come-dy “Widow’s Bay” focuses on New England mayor Tom Loftis (Matthew Rhys) who wants to turn his quaint little island into a tourist destination and build a better future for his teenage son. Despite spotty WiFi, spotty cellular reception and superstitious locals, he’s successful - only to discover that the locals were right and the island is cursed. After decades of calm, the old stories start coming true.

Matthew Rhys stars alongside an ensemble cast led by Kate O’Flynn, Stephen Root, Kingston Rumi Southwick, Kevin Carroll and Dale Dickey. The supporting cast includes K Callan and Emmy Award winner Jeff Hiller. Created by Katie Dippold and directed by Hiro Murai, and produced by Apple Studios.

Now Streaming

“Stranger Things: Tales from ‘85” is currently streaming on Netflix. The new animated series takes place between the second and third seasons of the live-action franchise, in the winter of 1985. Something has awakened beneath the ice, and it’s up to our crew to save Hawkins, in this new story set in the Stranger Things universe. Now our heroes Eleven (Brooklyn Davey Norstedt), Mike (Luca Diaz), Will (Benjamin Plessala), Dustin (Braxton Quinney), Lucas (Elisha “EJ” Williams), and Max (Jolie Hoang-Rappaport) have to deal with terrifying new monsters surfacing all over town.

They’ll have the help of Hopper (Brett Gipson) and Steve (Jeremy Jordan, “Supergirl.”) A new companion — the pink-haired Nikki Baxter (Odessa A’zion, “Marty Supreme”) — is poised to join the party. Janeane Garofalo also lends her voice as Anna Baxter as well as Lou Diamond Phillips as Daniel Fischer, Robert Englund as Cosmo, Alysia Reiner as Karen Wheeler, Alessandra Antonelli as Nancy Wheeler, Valeria Rodriguez as Rosario, and Jack Griffo as Jeff. Robles executive produces the series via Flying Bark Productions, along with the Duffer Brothers and Hilary Leavitt via Upside Down Pictures, Shawn Levy via 21 Laps, and Dan Cohen.

Coming Soon

On May 4, “Lord of the Flies,” a 4 part limited series based on the classic novel by William Golding, premieres on Netflix. The series follows a group of English school children who become castaways on a desert island after a deadly plane crash. The children attempt to deal with the crisis with civility, but the situation quickly descends into deadly savagery as tribes form and a power struggle emerges.

Creator and writer Jack Thorne says the timing couldn’t be more important. “As a society, we’re having a conversation right now about boys,” he says. “We’re losing a generation of boys, and we’re losing it because of the hate they are ingesting — because it is an answer to their loneliness and isolation.”

Starring David McKenna (Piggy), Winston Sawyers (Ralph), Lox Pratt (Jack), Ike Talbut (Simon), and Thomas Connor (Roger), the series is created and written by Emmy-winner Jack Thorne and directed by Marc Munden (“The Mark of Cain,” “National Treasure,” “Help.”)
